A Visit to the Cleveland Museum of Art
Our class is going on a field trip to the Cleveland Museum of Art.
A bus will pick us up at school and take us back after our visit.
The museum is a special place to see objects that artists made.
The outside of the museum looks like this.
The inside of the museum looks like this.
When we get to the museum, our teachers will meet us in the lobby.
They will help us with our coats and get us ready to look at art.
They will tell us that we cannot touch artwork because that is the best way to take care of it.
Sometimes there is a railing or a line on the floor that reminds us not to touch artworks.
Can we talk in the museum?
Yes, but because it is a quiet place, you can whisper and we can still hear you.
First, we will walk across the biggest room in the museum. It is called the atrium because it has a glass ceiling.
Then we will visit a gallery, which is a name for a room that has art in it.
In the galleries, we will see many different types of artworks. Some are big. Some are small.
And some you can walk all the way around. They are called sculptures.
We will do fun activities together.
And best of all, we will share our ideas.
Before we know it, it will be time to get back on the bus and return to school. See you later!
